

FOR CLIENTS WORKING ON LOW MOOD, BEHAVIORAL ACTIVATION, OR THOUGHT RECORDS

Low mood & behavioral activation

Your interventions stay yours. This use plan is a recommended structure for InkWell to support your client's work between sessions, and everything in it runs on the free tier.

Goal

Consistent daily capture of the activity and mood connection, structured perspective-taking on hard moments, and a positive-affect practice that doesn't go flat from repetition. You review adherence through a client-shared Practice Summary, then work the content in session.

How to use this plan

- 1 Match it to your work. Page 2 is the client's take-home: each InkWell practice mapped to a common between-session assignment. Adjust cadence and emphasis to fit your intervention; this is a starting structure, not a prescription.
- 2 Introduce it in session. The client downloads InkWell free on web, iOS, or Android, and you walk the take-home page together. A way to say it is below.
- 3 Review together. After a week or two of use, the client emails themselves a Practice Summary and forwards it to you. What it shows, and what it never includes, is in the Practice Summary box below.

A WAY TO SAY IT

"Between sessions, I'd like you to try a journaling app called InkWell. It's free, and this page shows exactly how we'll use it. Your writing stays yours; nothing you put in it is shared with me unless you choose to share it. Mostly, it gives the work we do here somewhere to live during the week. We'll look at how it went next time."

What the Practice Summary shows you

- Days journaled and cadence over 7, 30, or 90 days
- Practice mix: how often Reframe, gratitude, and quick capture were used
- Writing rhythm and word-count trend
- Self-rated FeelCheck shift once enough pairs exist

Client-generated, sent to the client's own email, forwarded to you by the client. Usage patterns only; entry text, titles, and tags are never included.

Scope

- Not crisis care, and no substitute for crisis services or your clinical judgment
- Not treatment: InkWell is a wellness journaling tool and doesn't diagnose or treat
- Not a medical record: the Practice Summary is a client-shared usage snapshot
- The free tier is complete; nothing in this plan requires the client to pay

YOUR TAKE-HOME PLAN · MOOD & ACTIVITY

Your week with InkWell

Your practitioner uses InkWell to give the work you do together somewhere to live between sessions. This page is your plan for the week: free, a few minutes at a time, and built so you can't fall behind.

The plan

WHEN	WHAT TO DO
Daily, 1–2 min	Quick capture (InkBlot): jot one short note about what you did today and how it felt. Type it or speak it; InkWell turns your voice into clean text.
After a hard moment	Reframe: a guided four-step practice that helps you look at the moment from a different angle, in your own words.
Once a week	Gratitude practice: InkWell suggests a different research-backed practice each time so it stays fresh. Follow whichever one appears.
Optional, per practice	FeelCheck: rate how heavy things feel, 1 to 5, before and after a practice. It's a feeling, not a grade; it helps you notice what shifts.

Good to know

- Missed a day? That's normal, and nothing is lost. Open the app and write when you're back.
- This plan is a best-possible week, not a test. Some weeks you'll do all of it, some weeks one entry. All of it counts.
- One honest line is a real entry. Length doesn't matter; showing up does.
- Your words stay yours. The summary you can share with your practitioner shows patterns only, never what you wrote.
